Description of the subject	Without achieving the development of the social sphere, it is impossible to achieve sustainable development of the economy, and society in general. Thus, there is a direct dependence between the development of society, as well as the social sphere, and the development of the economy. It is this dependence that embodies the social and economic relations between members of society. The form of these relations corresponds to the level of development of the areas included in the social sphere. In this regard, the development of the social sphere is of particular importance.

The purpose of the subject	The economics of social spheres studies the system of economic relations that arise in the fields of science, education, culture and art, healthcare, tourism, social security, housing and communal services, etc. The effectiveness of these relations is formed in the process of ensuring social well-being
Learning outcomes of the subject	You are starting the course "Economics of Social Sectors" of your education.
